 Did You Know?

Dear Rick,

We hope you had a Happy Thanksgiving with all your friends and family! December has finally come and with it, some exciting new Predator news!

You said it best.

"Thanks for providing a cheaper laser tag system that competes with the others."

Customer at IAAPA

The Predator Games software update was released last month and is a big success so far. Fields are reporting far less errors and much stabler game play. We are already working on the next round of improvements due to be released shortly. If you are having any issues, let us know!

Stay Connected.

This month also marks the first month that Predator Games is combining our newsletter efforts with Tippmann. You'll begin to see more Tippmann related laser tag info and events next year.

So check out the latest Predator News and be sure to enjoy this magical time of year. Merry Christmas and Happy Holidays!

Predator Games and Tippmann at IAAPA 2010

The 2010 IAAPA (International Attractions and Amusement Parks Association) Expo was recently held in Orlando, Florida and drew thousands of guests and vendors. Tippmann was present at the show and Predator Games paintball laser tag was heavily featured among other paintball gear. Visitors came from around the world and many stopped by to learn more about Predator laser tag and how it could benefit their entertainment business. Most guests couldn't believe that the other competitors sell stuff at such a high price point. Predator demo'd the simple use, durability, and capabilities of the system to interested parties and those passing by. Everyone who attended IAAPA 2010 left with something valuable, whether it was new equipment, fresh ideas, or just good memories.

For more information on the IAAPA Expo, visit www.iaapa.org.

Predator Games paintball laser tag was recently featured in a local Fox news segment at a local field in Texas. Lasertag DFW hosts the show in a local city park (where they play) and proudly displays Predator laser tag in action. Viewers saw players of all ages participating and having fun. The show focuses on the fitness and team building aspects of laser tag and was a great tool for showing the general public how safe and fun it is. Field Spotlight - Action Adventure Games

Canada brings us another fantastic laser tag field this month, Action Adventure Games (AAG). AAG began offering laser tag in July 2010 after making the transition from paintball when the market became saturated. This opened up a new stream of revenue and attracted new players that otherwise would not have tried paintball.

AAG benefited from having reduced costs in materials and wages, and saved time on many normal things like cleaning and setting up.

To learn more about Action Adventure Games, go to www.predatorgames.com/Featured_main.cfm.

The Field Spotlight section of the newsletter is now the same as the Feature Field found on our website, www.predatorgames.com. This gives the field more exposure and reduces any confusion. To become a Feature Field, email social@predatorgames.com with subject "FEATURE FIELD."

Did You Know?

Predator Games paintball laser tag units are extremely durable? The electronics are housed in a glass-filled nylon case that is highly impact resistant. It can stand up to the harshest of abuses and is perfect for use by little kids. Hundreds of drop tests and demonstrations have been done to prove the durability of these cases. The electronics are water resistant and operate in very cold or hot temperatures. Very few loose parts means less breakage after years of use. All Barracuda units are built with a Tippmann gun body. Tippmann is known around the world for the extreme durability of their products. Rest assured, when you go with Predator Games, you'll be saving on repair costs down the road. Predator currently offers a 1 year warranty program and turns around most returns within 48 hours.

 The durability discussed in this article refers solely to the new style four battery Barracudas and Eagle Eyes.*

Sincerely,

Predator Games
